Logging in to your Account Manager as a POP box user

$(function(){ $(".Box").css("display","none"); });
Logging in to your Account Manager with your administrative username and password give you access to all of your account settings / configurations; however, logging in with the username and password of one of your POP boxes will generate a much more limited account manager giving that user options to manage only their email account settings including changing / resetting their password and managing the spam and virus settings on their own account (if spam and virus protection is installed):
